New York, June 5.—Mrs. Lillian P. Dale will have to fight for the $150,000 for which she sued her husband, Francis Colgate Dale. Her suit, filed some time ago, complained that he agreed to support her in luxury for life if she gave him their child after she obtained her divorce. Because of this agreement, she said, no mention of alimony was made during the divorce proceedings. Denying that he has willfully failed to provide for the child, who is now in the mother's Cusfody. Dale today has filed an answer through his attorneys, condert Brothers. The answer states that Mrs. Dale has refused to accept assistance from him in caring for the child, and asks for dismissal of her complaint. "The possession of university degrees does not necessarily mark the educated person, said Dr. Stocking. "It is pos-sible for one to be a graduate of a university and have a mind in its infancy. The man who knows what is right and does it is educated."

Dr. Stocking labeled as the most ignorant those who boast of their learning.
"The astronomer who has 'lived' in the heavens and can call each star by name knows how much he does not know about astronomy, while the man who can not tell one heavenly planet from an-other thinks he knows it all," he said.

Dr. Stocking advised the graduates against living and working in an exclu-sive atmosphere as did the hermit stu-dents of the past. "The learning which separates a man from his fellow crea-tures," he said, "is not the learning for the present day. Universal democratic rork is the dectrine of present-day civili-

Both of these men have outlived their usefulness as observers for the President. Carrothers is the strongest kind of a Vilia partisan; in fact, so close has his connection been with Villa that the State Department has been forced to bury a strong recommendation for his removal by a special agent of the department. Mr. Carrothers, however, has not outlived his usefulness as a representation.

As much cannot be said for Mr. Silliman. Silliman knew Carranza before the revolution: in fact, did business with him as a mjikman. Silliman's early espousal of Carranza's cause while still United States vice consul at Saltillo nearly cost him his life at the hands of Huertistas during the occupation of Vera Cruz by American forces.

This is the kind of information upon which the President and the State Devanted by Sully, and his attorney.

"The Sully case in a nutshell," Mr. Hammond said, "Is this: He claims that I prevented him from selling stock of the General Cotton Securities Company, which owned the patent rights in a cotton gin known as the Doremus gin. This is true. Sully made many threats to sell stock to the public, but as the gin. which was the sole asset of the company, had not been demonstrated to be of com-mercial value, I objected to the sale of stock. "I am thoroughly disgusted with the whole business. I have had nothing to do with it for four years.
